Faculty of Education
Marshall D'Avray Hall
The University of New Brunswick
Fredericton, NB

Atlantic Education Graduate Student Conference

What theoretical and/or practical problems motivate graduate research in education today? What, if any, additional problems arise with regard to research methodology? What sort of solutions might educational problems entail? The aim of this conference is to address these general questions and others with reference to current graduate student research. In doing so, we hope to highlight both convergent and divergent directions in graduate research, and to foster connections among burgeoning scholars in the field. We therefore invite papers from all areas of educational studies and all levels of graduate study.

Potential presentations may cover, but are not limited to, the following topics:

- aboriginal education
- adult education
- assessment/evaluation
- career education
- 21st Century Education
- civic education
- counselling
- curriculum studies
- curricular/non-curricular policy
- democratic education
- early childhood education
- epistemology
- history of education
- inclusive education
- leadership
- linguistics
- media and education
- online education
- post-secondary education
- pedagogy
- psychology and education
- social/economic/political context of education
- teacher education
- technology and education

Please submit your 150 word abstract (for a 30-minute paper or presentation) as a Word or PDF attachment to atlanticeduc@gmail.com by 4 May 2012. The abstract must include a title. In the body of your e-mail, please include your name, e-mail address, level of study, university, and mention any audio/visual equipment you require. All submissions will receive a decision via email notification by 18 May 2012. All presenters will be invited to submit their papers for possible publication in the post-conference refereed proceedings.
