

From the President's Desk

Dr. Ramona Lumpkin

A clear view from the Mount

When I joined Mount Saint Vincent University as its 12th President and Vice-Chancellor last October, I knew I was becoming part of an organization that has contributed richly to the fabric of this province, and this country. The Mount's pioneering spirit has been evident since our founding nearly 140 years ago by the Sisters of Charity. We were the first institution in the Commonwealth to offer degrees to women, and the first in Atlantic Canada to offer televised courses so that working adults could pursue an education.

At the Mount, education has always been viewed as a pathway to social justice. The advancement of women remains a cornerstone of our current strategic plan, as does the commitment to ensuring that our programs are accessible to students of all ages and income levels. Community service is another deeply held value, reflected in the current engagement of our faculty and students with more than 100 community-based research projects on topics such as care for the aging, food security, and gender inequalities in the lives of girls and women.

The Mount's connection to our surrounding community is strong, and I've been deeply grateful for the warm welcome extended to me by that community. Most of those whom I've met have a clear understanding of our character and accomplishments, but I've encountered from time to time an impression that the Mount is somehow in financial jeopardy.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

The Mount has a long record of sound leadership and governance, focusing equally on service to students and on fiscal responsibility. The university has balanced its budget for almost two decades and prudent management has ensured that our operating costs per full-time student are the lowest in the province. Further, we have among the lowest debt ratios in the province as measured both in relation to ensured assets and to the size of our student body. We've taken every opportunity to reduce costs where possible and make wise investments to strengthen our operations, and all this while continuing to make student financial support and academic excellence a priority.

These successes have not been without their challenges. To address recent provincial funding reductions, the Board, in consultation with faculty, staff, alumnae and students, has chosen to meet this constraint through a combination of budget cuts and an increase to tuition, $165 per year for a full-time student. At the same time, our commitment to providing adequate financial support to students continues, and the past decade has seen us double the amount of scholarship and bursary aid that we offer.

Financial support is just one reason students continue to study at the Mount, and why our enrolment grew by close to 3% last year. We are renowned for our wide range of programs and areas of study within arts, sciences, professional studies and education. The Mount is also a leader in co-operative education, distance education, and the research productivity of our faculty (who rank first in the country in the percentage who hold research grants from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council).

I'm also pleased to announce that on May 1st the Mount launched a bold fundraising initiative, Project TWENTY12, which will raise funds to build the first academic building on our campus to be opened since 1971. Not only will the new building provide much-needed teaching and research space for our faculty and students, but it will honour women through a special installation dedicated to 12 inspiring women. It will also have a Women's Wall of Honour that will recognize 2,012 women important to all our community members in our daily lives. To date, we have secured over $4 million toward the $12 million goal.

I'm happy to report to our community that the view from the Mount is clear. With a solid financial record, a sound strategic plan and a proven commitment to academic excellence, the Mount is positioned for continued success in serving the educational needs of students in our province and around the world.

Funding Priority:

Recently, Mount Saint Vincent University launched Project TWENTY12 - the most ambitious fundraising project in our history - to provide our students with a learning environment that is contemporary, technology rich and interactive. In addition to providing students with the best learning experience, in the best environment for learning, the most unique aspect of the new Teaching, Learning and Research Centre will be the dedication of every aspect of the building to the contributions of women.

If you wish to receive information on how to celebrate the women in your life through Project TWENTY12, please contact University Advancement at giving@msvu.ca or 902.457.6470.

While we have made every effort to ensure accuracy, please accept our apologies for any errors or omissions.
