Katie Aubrecht

Katie Aubrecht is the Research Coordinator at the Nova Scotia Centre on Aging. Her responsibilities include identifying and assisting in the development of funding proposals, implementing projects, and the preparation of reports, academic articles and other publications of research findings, as well as quality control for the Centre's publications.

Katie received her MA in Sociology from York University and is currently a PhD Candidate (ABD) and SSHRC CGS Doctoral Award winner in the critical disability studies stream in Sociology and Equity Studies in Education at the University of Toronto. Katie has worked as a lead researcher, research coordinator and co-author of an Ontario Ministry Training, Colleges and Universities research project and report on disability within university curriculum, and as a Project Coordinator on the development of a proposal for a school of interdisciplinary health studies and undergraduate university program. She has also taught Sociology part-time at St. Francis Xavier University, and has been involved with groups to improve accessibility in postsecondary education for over five years. She has several peer-reviewed publications from her doctoral research on the social organization of mental health and illness, and has presented at national and international conferences.
