Pamela Fancey

Pamela Fancey has 20 years of project management, research, evaluation and consultation experience. Her research areas include supports for family and friend caregivers, caregiver assessment, age-friendly communities, older workers, social isolation, abuse of older adults, and dementia care.

Pamela has led a number of evaluation projects, co-authored more than 25 papers and technical reports and has given numerous presentations at local and national conferences. She also gives presentations and delivers workshops to community organizations and health care professionals.

As Associate Director of the NS Centre on Aging, Pam is responsible for the implementation of the Centre's activities. Her role includes strategic planning, project development and implementation, identifying research priorities and funding sources, budget monitoring, event planning, presentations and other dissemination activities, and mentoring students and trainees. She represents the Centre at provincial, regional and national forums, and fosters and brokers partnerships with government and other stakeholders.

In addition to her role at the Centre, Pamela has been a sessional instructor with the Department of Family Studies and Gerontology, Mount Saint Vincent University and has served on a number of community boards. She received the Award of Recognition from the Gerontology Association of Nova Scotia (2007) and in 2018 was the recipient of Northwood's Live More Award for Research.
