

Promoting Equity in Early Childhood: A Storytelling Series to Build Atlantic Connections

June 7th, 2023

“Quote from participant: "I am really interested to see where each province in the East Coast is for accessibility and inclusion. It shows we all struggle with the same issues. Listening to the stories was very interesting and helpful [to demonstrate] that we are not alone."

Participants were asked to describe the final session of the storytelling series in one word. Here is what they had to say...

Thank you!

The ECCRC would like first to thank all the storytellers who shared their stories. We value their vulnerability in sharing their own stories and lived experiences and their work to actively engage in the courageous work of dismantling systems of oppression in an effort to achieve equity for all young children and their families. We would also like to thank all of our partners who made this work possible, our funders (Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council [SSHRC] and the Margaret and Wallace McCain Family Foundation) and our creative Graphic Designer, Rach Derrah, and many others.
